Cybercrime

Is haunting young people,
All the time, all the time,
Never giving them a rest.
Getting on the Net is their passion,
And sharing pictures is a fashion.
It happens in every country,
In every city,
In every type of way,
All day.
Strangers share their pictures,
They are so ashamed,
And they're afraid to tell,
And so it goes on and on.
When no one does anything to stop them,
These cybernet villains have won.
Healthy young girls
Become a shadow of themselves,
They cry and shout
But don't see a way out.
More than often it ends with death.
Cybercriminals see it as a game.

Dear Ted,

Are you still staying up late to prepare for tests or to play music? I really want you to know I was not mad about your band or music. I am very worried about your health.

I still remember your big hug to me for your newly-started band. You was smiling like a shining star, and I was as happy as you, REALLY. "If you need a shoulder to rest on, don't forget your old man is right here for you," as I told you at that moment. However, I found you often prepared for the tests late at night and didn't eat well since you had to practice playing music with the members. That worries your mom and me very much. I would like to let you know that you are everything to us, and you always make my heart full of joy. I truly hope you could be happy and also healthy.

There shouldn't be any reason I could call your music garbage, and I know I've hurt your feelings. I won't do that again. I've booked a table at your favorite restaurant at six tonight and really hope to see you there.

With lots of love,
