(40-42)

Nora worked as a cleaner at a hospital. Although she had big dreams to play music or become a dancer before, she didn't make it. Besides, she stopped talking to her friends or parents because she didn't think they understood her.

One day, Nora lost her job. When her cat died the next day, it was the last straw. That night, she decided to end her life. She stood on the road and closed her eyes. After she heard a squeal of brakes, she woke up and found herself in the Midnight Library.

The librarian gave Nora a book and told her the rules of it. She could go back in time and change the past by writing down the time in the book. However, Nora found that every time she went back and tried to fix things, she made everything worse.

After she did that many times, she got the conclusion. As long as she tries to change the past, she can never have a good future. Now she must find a way to make things better.
