It's hard being a teenager
You're growing up so fast
Face of zits
And hairy pits
While the world is buzzing past

Hanging with your friends at lunch
And checking out the boys
Getting lots of school work
And throwing out the toys

It's hard being a teenager
You don't know what to do
You're not a child, not yet an adult
You wish you never grew

When you reach your 20's
Become a woman or a man
You'll really want to be a teen again...

Sometimes you just want to get away from your family and leave some time to yourself. But you're surprised to find yourself missing everything at your home when leaving home to another place, just a few miles away or on the other side of the world. What's that about? Believe it or not, you're feeling homesick.

When you're homesick, you might miss familiar things like your family, friends, pets, house, or neighbors. Or, you just miss something like your bed or the tree outside your window. But when you are TOO homesick, you may feel angry, sad or even nauseous, like headaches.

There are some ways to deal with homesickness. First, it is common to feel not comfortable with new things around you and wish to be back with familiar people and places of home. So, you have to understand that homesickness is not strange. Second, bring some things of home to your new place. They will make you feel comfortable when you are lonely. Third, call home when you can. A quick call to hear your parent's voice or your sister's story about washing the dog can be helpful. Also, don't be afraid to talk about feeling homesick and say something to your new friends.

It needs hands to build a house, but only hearts can build a home. There is no place like home, so love your family; and most importantly, love yourself first.
