四、閱讀測驗：第34~39題，每題2分，佔12%。

(34~36)

All living things do not have the same lifespan. Usually, the faster a living thing grows and moves during its life, the shorter its life will be.

Animals with many offspring may have shorter lives than those with only a few babies. Large animals live longer than small ones. Some animals live only for several weeks, but others can live for more than one hundred years. For example, worker ants have a lifespan which is less than a year, but American Box Turtles can live for more than one hundred years. Compared with American Box Turtles, workers ants are smaller. They grow faster and have more offspring.

Of course, changes in diet and disease can also make animals live longer or shorter. The following list shows some animals' lifespans. Maybe you would be surprised to know it.

Animal: Lifespan (Year)
Queen Ant: 3	Worker Ant: 1/2
Kangaroo: 9	Fox: 14
Bear: 40	Elephant: 70
	American Box Turtle: 122

※Word Bank: offspring 後代 compare 比較 diet 飲食 disease 疾病

34. What does the word lifespan mean?

- (A) how long an animal lives
- (B) how much food an animal eats
- (C) how fast an animal runs
- (D) how fast an animal moves

35. What can we learn about ants from the reading?

- (A) Most queen ants are smaller than most worker ants.
- (B) Most worker ants live longer than most queen ants.
- (C) Most queen ants live for only a year.
- (D) Most worker ants have more offspring than mice.

36. What do we know from the reading?

- (A) Small animals live longer than big ones.
- (B) Disease can make animals live longer.
- (C) Animals with fewer offspring might live longer.
- (D) The faster the living thing moves, the longer its life may be.

(37~39)

Here is a true cat and dog story which happened in China. There was a dog that nursed some kittens whose mother died. Their owner, Cai, said he has been raising cats and dogs together for more than ten years, and they all got along together well. However, this was the first time he had ever seen kittens being nursed by a Chinese dog.

The four kittens seemed happy with their new mother's milk. Cai said, "Several days ago, the kittens' mother died after eating a poisoned rat, leaving behind the kittens without milk." The kittens' cries may have stirred the dog's nature. It volunteered to feed the kittens of its old friend.

The dog's own puppies had been taken away. This is perhaps another reason why the dog adopted the kittens. She lost all of her own children.

※Word Bank: nurse 哺乳 poisoned 有毒的 stir 引起

37. What is true about the reading?

- (A) The cat died because of its old age.
- (B) The dog's puppies died a few days ago.
- (C) It's Cai's first time keeping cats and dogs together.
- (D) The dog volunteered to take care of the kittens.

38. Which may NOT be the main reason why the dog nursed the kittens?

- (A) The dog had some milk, so it nursed the kittens, too.
- (B) Cai had the dog to nurse the kittens.
- (C) The dog wanted to do something for its old friend.
- (D) The dog missed its puppies, so it treated the kittens as its own children.
